THE ACADEMY AND ITS OBJECTIVES

The Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia (prior to July 1971 the Social Science Research Council of Australia) is a corporate body of social scientists. Its functions are:

- (i) to encourage the advancement of the social sciences in Australia;
- (ii) to act as a co-ordinating group for the promotion of research and teaching in the social sciences;
- (iii) to foster research and to subsidise the publication of studies in the social sciences;
- (iv) to encourage and assist in the formation of other national associations or institutions for the promotion of the social sciences or any branch of them;
- (v) to act as the Australian national member of international organizations connected with social sciences; and
- (vi) to act as a consultant and adviser in regard to social sciences.

For the origins and development of the Academy, see the 1975-76 (or an earlier) Annual Report, and K.S. Cunningham: The Social Science Research Council of Australia 1942-1952, SSRC, Canberra, 1967.

Each member, on election to the Academy, takes the title of Fellow. As at 30 June 1986 there were 197 Fellows of the Academy. New Fellows are elected by postal ballot on the recommendation of the Membership Committee. The Academy's functions are discharged by an Annual General Meeting and the Executive Committee. The Executive Committee consists of the President, the Treasurer and seven other members all elected at the Annual General Meeting.

Since 1953 the Australian Government has provided an annual grant to assist the Academy to meet administrative and travel costs. In 1985-86 the grant was $88,830.

Four Panels, each representing related groups of disciplines as described on page 7, serve the Academy with advice relating to membership matters, the selection of new research topics and general policy issues. Panel activities are supplemented by assemblies of Fellows on a State basis which meet from time to time in the various capital cities to discuss issues of current significance to particular States or other matters referred to them by the Executive.

The Academy has put much emphasis upon its Major Research Projects, which are described in the next section of this Report. They have stimulated new research, both among the Fellows of the Academy and throughout universities and research institutes in Australia. They have also helped to clarify issues of national significance and have at times involved close collaboration with government officials and departments at both Federal and State levels. This interaction has been essential to the progress of these Projects, particularly in the cases of the Projects on the Aborigines in Australian Society and Immigrants in Australia.

The Academy also pursues a number of shorter-term enterprises which aim to study topics assessed to be of major significance, both academically and nationally. These form the basis of the Academy's annual programme of seminars and workshops, which have been playing an increasingly important role over the past three or four years. Further details also follow in the next section of this Report.

Research is not, however, the only function of the Academy: it also has a role to play as a consultant and adviser and in promoting and encouraging 'the advancement of the social sciences' both in Australia and abroad. In these wider roles the Academy appreciates its collaboration with the Academies of Science, the Technological Sciences and the Humanities through the deliberations of the Consultative Committee of the Australian Academies and in joint seminars and workshops. It also seeks a more effective liaison with government departments and research organizations which are prime users of social science concepts, data and methodologies.

The Academy sustains its international activities through its affiliation with the Association of Asian Social Science Research Councils (AASSREC) but unfortunately had to withdraw from its affiliation with the International Federation of Social Science Organizations (IFSSO) because of financial stringencies. A new venture of considerable significance initiated in 1980 was continued: an interchange scheme between the Australian Academies of the Social Sciences and the Humanities, acting jointly, and the Chinese Academy of the Social Sciences (see page 12). The Academy expresses its appreciation of the Australian Government's continued support for this scheme.

ACADEMY ACTIVITIES

1. RESEARCH

Four Major Projects have been completed by the Academy and its predecessor, the Social Science Research Council of Australia: Women in Australia, Taxation in Australia, Aborigines in Australian Society and Immigrants in Australia. Explorations for further projects continue in two areas: Australia and the Pacific Islands, and Health and Behaviour.

The results of each of the first two projects were produced as a single volume. The Aborigines Project was a much larger and longer-term enterprise which generated twelve research monographs and three major synoptic volumes by the Project's Director, Dr Charles Rowley. This series covers a wide range of topics including the history of Aborigines since European settlement in Australia, their settlement patterns in both remote and urban areas, their economic status, their health and their morbidity. In 1984-85 Dr Rowley continued studies of Aboriginal communities.

In the Immigration Project, ten monographs were published. These include studies of selected ethnic groups, immigrant communities, patterns of income and expenditure, political attitudes and behaviour, and the impacts of professional and highly skilled immigrants in Australian society. This project did much to stimulate research of ethnic communities in Australia and in other issues of vital concern to immigrants such as the series Studies in the Education of Migrant Children, which was financially supported by the Commonwealth Department of Education. Under the title The Educational Experience of Sydney High School Children, the first Report was produced in 1979, the second in 1981, and the third in 1983.

A project on Australia and the Pacific Islands led to a Workshop, involving administrators and academics from Fiji, Samoa and the Solomon Islands, as well as from Australian universities and relevant departments of state, in June 1986. This three-day Workshop considered a range of political, economic and social questions concerning relations between Australia and the island states and a report is being prepared. A group of Fellows has continued to develop a project on Health and Behaviour, dealing with the very major influence of social conditions and attitudes on health. This is expected to lead to a major volume and perhaps to continued Academy involvement in this subject. Meetings have also been held to plan work on National Identity, bringing together demographic, linguistic, psychological and other influences on the development of national identity, and in particular of an Australian identity.

A number of other projects are being actively pursued and will take shape during the remainder of 1986.

The Academy also continued its sponsorship of 'Trend Reports'. The three-volume Surveys of Australian Economics was followed by the publication of the second 'Trend Report', Surveys of Australian Political Science. The Psychology volume, entitled Australian Psychology: Review of Research has also been completed. Reports in Education and Geography are in press, while work continues on a Report in Law. Other studies being considered are Social Anthropology, Sociology, Demography and Linguistics. The series is being published by Allen & Unwin, Sydney.

2. ANNUAL SYMPOSIA

The Annual Symposium held at the Annual General Meeting in November 1985 was on the topic Equality of Opportunity Reconsidered. Papers presented were:

- Equity and Standards in Education: Is there a Conflict? (Professor Dame Leonie Kramer and Mr Hugh Hudson)
- The Role of Affirmative Action in Achieving Equality of Opportunity (The Hon. Senator Susan Ryan and Dr W. Sadurski)
- Economic Perspectives (Professor H. Geoffrey Brennan)

The Proceedings are being prepared for publication by the Academy.

In November 1985 the Annual General Meeting agreed that the Annual Symposium for November 1986 should discuss the topic The Role of the Social Scientist as Policy Adviser.

3. ANNUAL LECTURE

The Thirteenth Annual Lecture of the Academy was given in the Coombs Lecture Theatre, Australian National University on Tuesday, 5 November 1985 by Professor Peter Karmel, Vice-Chancellor of The Australian National University. The Lecture entitled Quality and Equality in Education will be published as an integral part of the Proceedings of the 1985 Academy Symposium.

The Academy Lecturer for 1986 is Sir Paul Hasluck, former Governor-General of Australia. Sir Paul's topic The Social Scientist in a Democracy will complement the 1986 Symposium referred to above.

4. INTERNATIONAL ACTIVITIES

The Academy continued its affiliation with the Association of Asian Social Science Research Councils (AASSREC).

In 1985-86 the fifth round of the Exchange Scheme between the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences and the Academies of the Humanities and of the Social Sciences in Australia was completed.

The Scheme, which began in 1980 and is funded by the Australian Government on an annual basis, has had to be curtailed by 50 per cent in terms of the number of person-weeks available for the exchange of scholars. The reduction, which became necessary due to the rapidly increasing costs of administration within China, now allows for an exchange of scholars to the level of 22 person-weeks each way.

As a result of support from the Australia/Japan Foundation, ASSA, together with the Australian Academy of the Humanities, will be extending its international links by conducting a program to foster Australia/Japan relations in the humanities and social science disciplines. The first stage of the program, which will commence in the 1986-87 financial year, will provide a number of grants to assist scholars to undertake research in Japan. The program may later include the sponsorship of meetings of scholars from both countries, held either in Japan or Australia, and an exchange scheme to bring Japanese scholars to Australia.

(a) AASSREC

The Sixth Biennial Conference of AASSREC was held in Bali, Indonesia, 2-7 September 1985. The Conference, which was hosted by the Indonesian Institute of Sciences (LIPI), marked the conclusion of ASSA's term as Vice-President.

ASSA was represented by Professor W.D. Borrie (Academy delegate), Professor W.R. Geddes (editor and co-ordinator of the National Profile Studies series) and Dr J.J. Smolicz (author of the Australian paper for the symposium on Youth). The Australian contributions to the Conference were:

- Council Statement: Social Sciences in Australia: A statement on behalf of ASSA;
- Social Science and the Government; and
- Youth and Society: Viewpoints for the Future: Australia

The Proceedings are being published.

The Seventh Biennial Conference will be held in Seoul, Republic of Korea, 24-27 August 1987 where the main topics for discussion will be Societal Resilience: The Asia Pacific Context and Social Development and Housing.

(b) Chinese—Australian Exchange Scheme

Six Australian scholars were chosen to visit China in 1986. These were:

- Dr D. Ip, Lecturer, Department of Anthropology & Sociology, University of Queensland
- Dr D. Ironmonger, Deputy Director, Institute of Applied Economic and Social Research, University of Melbourne
- Dr A. McLaren, Post-doctoral research, University of Melbourne

Dr M.T. Skully, Senior Lecturer in Finance, University of NSW
Mr Teoh Hai Yap, Senior Lecturer in Accounting, University of Wollongong
Dr V.K. Wan, Lecturer in Business Finance and Information Systems in Accounting, University of Wollongong.

In October 1985 the Australian Academies of the Social Sciences and the Humanities received a small group of agricultural economists from the Chinese Academy consisting of:

Mr He Linchang, Deputy-editor-in-chief, 'China's Rural Economy'
Mr Yu Dechang, Vice-chief, Farm Research Office, Institute of Rural Development, CASS.
Mr Huang Qianghua, interpreter.

The group held discussions with the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Department of Primary Industry, CSIRO, NSW and Victorian Departments of Agriculture and universities in Sydney, Canberra and Armidale.

5. JOINT ACADEMY ACTIVITIES

Two meetings of the Consultative Committee of the Australian Academies were held in October and April. The Consultative Committee continued to consider matters including the funding of research, the funding of representation of national disciplinary bodies in international organizations, and the recognition of each of the four Academies as the national representative for the scholarly disciplines within their respective memberships.

During the year a general review of past activities and achievements of the CCAA was undertaken by the current Chairman, the Australian Academy of Technological Sciences. The review observed that, when undertaking to join a major, multi-disciplinary project, each Academy must commit itself to careful planning and to sustained participation in the overall management of the exercise.

ASSA's main contribution to the CCAA continued through Professor Fay Gale's study of the impact of tourism on rock art, particularly in the Kakadu area. Professor Gale's important observations in this area are being taken into account by the National Parks and Wildlife Service in the development of its practices.

6. NEWSLETTER

The Newsletter, which was first published in May 1982, continues to be published bi-annually. The current editor is Dr J.J. Smolicz of the University of Adelaide.

7. ADMINISTRATION

Professor R.G. Neale, who had been appointed as Executive Director from the commencement of the financial year, resigned the position as from 30 April 1986. Dr Don Rawson was appointed to the position and took up the appointment on 19 May. The Academy continues to occupy offices in the Garden Wing, University House, Australian National University.

Until 1977 the Academy assisted a number of activities by contributing to the cost of seminars, providing travel grants for study in Asia, or by directly subsidising journals. Many publications arose from these activities and lists of such are printed in the Annual Report for 1976-77 and earlier under the headings Publications Arising from Sponsored Activities and Publications Subsidised by the Academy.

The policy of sponsorship and subsidy was discontinued in 1977.

FELLOWS OF THE ACADEMY

The Rules of the Academy state that 'persons who are deemed to have achieved distinction in one or more branches of the social sciences may be elected as Fellows of the Academy if (i) they are nominated by one Fellow and seconded by two other Fellows; (ii) they are recommended by the Membership Committee after investigation of their eligibility; and (iii) they receive the support of a majority of the Fellows for the time being at a postal ballot'.

Eight new Fellows were elected in 1985. They were:

Professor H. Geoffrey Brennan, Professor of Economics, The Australian National University;

Professor G.J. Davison, Professor of History, Monash University;

Professor P.J. Fensham, Dean, Faculty of Education, Monash University;

Professor J.A.W. Forge, Professor of Anthropology, The Australian National University;

Professor Helen Hughes, Professor and Director, Development Studies Centre, Australian National University;

Professor R.L. Isaac, Professor of History, La Trobe University;

Dr J.M. Powell, Reader in Geography, Monash University; and Professor A.D. Woodland, Professor of Economic Statistics, The University of Sydney.

At June 1986 there were 197 Fellows, including Honorary and Overseas Fellows. The 1985 Annual General Meeting agreed that up to ten names should be submitted to the postal ballot for election to Fellowship in 1986. A list of Fellows, showing the year of election to Fellowship, is given in pages 17-38 of this Report.

The deaths of three Fellows were recorded during the year: Emeritus Professor Sir David Derham, Dr Charles Rowley and Professor Julius Stone. Mr Stanley Benn died on 25 July 1986. Obituaries appear on pages 42-49 of this Report.

OBITUARIES

STANLEY ISAAC BENN

Stanley Benn, who died in Canberra on 25 July 1986, was an internationally respected social and political philosopher. His book with R.S. Peters Social Principles and the Democratic State (1959) went into many printings, and no doubt there will be more in the future.

After war service in Europe in the army education corps, he graduated BSc(Econ) at the London School of Economics in 1947. He was then Lecturer and Senior Lecturer in Government at the University of Southampton. It was here that he became essentially a philosopher as distinct from a political theorist, and he came to a Senior Fellowship in the Department of Philosophy, Research School of Social Sciences, The Australian National University in 1962. He became a Professorial Fellow in 1973 and he retired at the end of 1985, but was a Visiting Fellow in the Department at the time of his death. He was elected to the Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia in 1965 and to the Australian Academy of the Humanities in 1979.

Benn had a powerfully original and independent mind and yet at the same time he had a liking for collaboration and joint authorship. His lunch hours were often periods of intense philosophical discussion with a colleague no less than for fortification of the inner man. His bent for co-operative work led to some well known collections of essays on specific topics, collections to which he was himself a major contributor, as well as doing a great deal of editorial work on the other contributions. Of recent years he wrote a number of important essays in the field of applied ethics. Recently he contributed an important essay on the ethics of nuclear war which was the first article in the first number of the new Journal of Applied Philosophy (1984). Out of these papers on applied ethics one can discern a developing system of theoretical ethics. In the last two years of his life Benn was busy on a book, completed just before his death, in which he explicitly worked out his novel ethical system. In contrast to the utilitarianism of Social Principles and the Democratic State he had come to an ethics in which Respect for Persons took the central position. In this it is nearer the tradition of Kant than of Bentham. It is hoped that a colleague will see the book through the press, and it may well be hailed as one of the most original and important books in ethics of recent years.

Benn had outstandingly admirable personal qualities. He was a man of immense moral courage. His strength of mind and moral support at times of difficulty were something that the writer of this note will always remember with gratitude. In his final months Benn showed himself to be a man of great physical courage also, as he finished his book despite painful illness. Benn was an extremely lucid and persuasive speaker on the Faculty and on various other University committees, when his judgment was always perceptive and sound.

Benn and his wife Miriam loved the Australian bush. Nevertheless he still retained his essential Englishness. In him was the best of both countries.

EMERITUS PROFESSOR SIR DAVID DERHAM

David Derham died on 1 September 1985, after a long illness which he bore with patient, unwavering courage and good humour. He had two distinct academic careers. He was Professor of Jurisprudence in the University of Melbourne from 1951 to 1964, and went on to found the Monash Law School, where he was Dean of Law and also Sir Owen Dixon Professor of Law until he returned to Melbourne as its fourth Vice-Chancellor in March 1968.

His term as Vice-Chancellor encompassed the stormy years of opposition to Australia's participation in the Vietnam war, and some students' demands for greater participation in the management of the University. It was a time of great change, and of a reappraisal of the role and function of universities in Australian life. David presided over a famous, long-established University which had developed several institutional characteristics he considered ill-fitted it for what it could and should achieve, in learning, in scholarship and in preparing people for the professions, as this century came to its end. When he retired, prematurely because of his poor health, in May 1982, he had initiated and overseen the development of many innovations for its better government and organization.

The making of a great Vice-Chancellor meant that he could not, except in the most limited fashion, continue with legal scholarship. David had developed teaching and research in the twin disciplines of Australian constitutional law and jurisprudence in his years at Melbourne. He was considered, inside and outside Australia, as an outstanding legal philosopher, without being labelled as an adherent of one or other of the schools or factions in the jurisprudential galaxy. His most substantial published work was the Third Edition of George Paton's A Textbook of Jurisprudence, published in 1964, which incorporated his very substantial changes and additions, including important new sections or chapters on precedent, on legal personality (on which subject he wrote a significant essay in Legal Personality and Political Pluralism (1958), edited by the late Leicester Webb), and on the concept of possession. He was elected a Fellow of the SSRC, the forerunner of the Academy, in 1964.

Though he spent a short four years as Dean of Law in Monash University, David proposed, planned and developed ideas and programmes which have lasted till today: the double degree, with core subjects and later-year choices combined with studies in a discipline outside the law; recruitment of staff with a distribution of academic ranks commensurate with what was regarded as acceptable generally in non-laboratory faculties; a Law Library as the heart both of the faculty and of the building he took a major part in planning; and close relations between the legal profession and the Law School. When he left, the University accepted the proposal of his colleagues in the Law School that it should be named in his honour.

David was a gifted teacher, a generous mentor and a colleague who was always interested in what his fellow teachers were thinking and writing. He encouraged interdisciplinary studies and research. He saw law as 'not fixed and static. It moves and grows with the needs of the community it serves.' He saw legal education as a course of study in which the competing forces for change and stability in a legal system were discerned and appreciated, and the balance understood. He had the talent, and the determination, to communicate his ideas to those about him, and to many who will come after.

DR CHARLES ROWLEY

Early in the morning of September 18, 1985, Charles Dunford Rowley died peacefully in his sleep following a severe illness which he had suffered during the previous three months. We mourn his loss and convey our deep sympathy to his family.

But our grief is tempered by the reality that Charles Rowley's life-span of 78 years exceeded that which we of the western world now claim as our birthright and which until recently was almost twice that of the peoples whose welfare and dignity motivated this man to a life-time of distinguished study and publication. Charles Rowley never retired. His book, Recovery: The Politics of Aboriginal Reform, which was in Press at the time of his death, was published in March 1986 by Penguin, and until compelled by his illness to stop work, he was completing the writing of his extensive field studies of Aboriginal communities in the Sydney area.

This quiet Australian was seldom heard, but he went from achievement to achievement. He enlisted and served his country — and the cause of independence of colonial territories — for four years in the Second World War, until demobilised as a Lieutenant Colonel in 1946. He spoke little of this. To him the pen was indeed mightier than the sword, but the war launched him on fields of study of subject peoples, first of the Papuans and New Guineans and then of Australia's Aborigines, which gained him not only national, but also international recognition.

A graduate of Sydney University with first-class honours, Charles Rowley, like so many of his distinguished contemporaries began life as a high school teacher, for a decade after 1938. After the war he served in the new Universities Commission and the Commonwealth Office of Education. In 1950, he was appointed Principal of the Australian School of Pacific Administration in Sydney, where he deepened his scholarly studies of the peoples of New Guinea and of the Aborigines of Australia. He broadened his experience as an educational expert working for Unesco in South-east Asia and travelled and studied in USA as a Carnegie Fellow.

Then the flow of scholarly books began, first Australians in German New Guinea 1914-21 (1958) then The Lotus and the Dynamo (1960) and The New Guinea Villager (1965). These set the tone of his scholarship from here onwards. As Professor Ken Inglis has written, Charles Rowley was writing about 'the person at the centre of his vision: not the matters of policy or the administrators, but the human being whom policy-making and administration is about'.

Then came the flood. In 1964 the Social Science Research Council of Australia — soon to become the Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia — managed to garner some funds from the Myer Foundation and launch a major project to study Aborigines in Australian society. I think I am safe in saying that this project was the best investment of any Australian foundation in the social sciences, and the prime reason for its success was that Charles Rowley was persuaded to accept the role of Director of the project, a position which he held from 1964 to 1967. He returned to New Guinea in 1968 as the first Professor of Political Studies at the new University there, but the Academy's Aboriginal project continued to build upon the foundations so well laid by its Director. Some 10 volumes by individual scholars, sought out and encouraged by Charles Rowley, were eventually published, covering many aspects of Aboriginal life and society. But the jewels of the project were the massive contributions by the Director himself; three major volumes under the general title of Aboriginal Policy and Practice with the individual titles of: The Destruction of Aboriginal Society (1970), Outcasts in White Australia (1971), The Remote Aborigines (1971).

These works rightly earned Charles Rowley a Doctorate of Literature of the University of Sydney. Later, in his citation for the Honorary Degree of Dr of Laws conferred on Charles Rowley by ANU in 1983, Ken Inglis described this project as 'the most valuable gift of social science to Australia'. I agree, but would go further and add that these studies did more than anything else to change the directions of policies in Australia concerned with our Aboriginal people.

In 1974 Charles Rowley, already past the normal age of retirement, returned from New Guinea to Australia to take up the position of Executive Director of the Academy of the Social Sciences, in succession to the late Professor 'Joe' Burton. He held the post until 1979. While running the affairs of the Academy he produced another penetrating study in the field of Aboriginal policy, A Matter of Justice (1978), and for the five years 1975-80 was also Chairman of the Aboriginal Land Fund Commission of the Federal Government, a position which enabled him to persuade governments to give effect to many of the principles which he had advocated in his writings, although the slow pace of change often disappointed him.

Charles Rowley 'retired' again in 1979 when he left the Academy, but he was too much the scholar to stay intellectually idle. True, he spent more time with Irene tending their beautiful garden in Hawker. They also travelled: he was the Scholar-in-Residence at the Rockefeller Center in Ballagio in 1983. But from 1979 to 1981 he was a Visiting Fellow at ANU and from 1982 held the same position in the Australian Institute of Aboriginal Studies. He continued to direct field studies amongst rural and urban Aboriginal communities, following up the households he had studied some 15 years earlier. The books were smaller but no less seminal. Equity by Instalments (1982) was a comparative study of Aboriginal householders in rural New South Wales in 1965 and 1980. As stated above another short manuscript, built up from his address on the occasion of the award of his Honorary Degree at ANU in 1983, has been proofed and is in process of publication, with the title Decolonising Australia — The Politics of Aboriginal Recovery. Penguin also propose a third printing of his famous trilogy.

Some six months before his death, over one of our informal lunches in the Fellows Garden at University House, he told me that when these 'cleaning-up' processes were completed, he would 'hang up his boots'. He had only done that once before, when he stopped playing first grade Rugby League in Sydney. How fortunate Australia and social science scholarship are that he resisted the second temptation for so long! He was active to the end.

I predict that Charles Rowley's writings will live on for many years, for they contain fundamental truths above the nature of enduring societies-justice, tolerance, compassion, integrity. Above all he will be revered by those fortunate enough to have known him. A tribute to him in The Canberra Times wrote of him as 'a determined man who was also humble and unpretentious'. He was also a man of immense sagacity, humanity and generosity. Therein lay his greatness, for he was a great man by the standards that matter.

How appropriate that he was awarded the honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws by ANU in September 1983 'on the ground of his distinguished creative contributions in the service of society'.

PROFESSOR JULIUS STONE

Julius Stone, who died in Sydney on 3 September 1985, was a member of the Academy from its earliest days. He was a member of the group which, during the war, founded the Social Science Research Council which later became the Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia. He was, fittingly, elected as an Honorary Fellow in 1973. He was a justly famous law teacher and a jurist and legal scholar of international standing. Over a long period he played an active and prominent part in the life of the Australian community and he made significant contributions in speech, broadcast and writing to the debate on many significant public issues.

He was born on 2 July 1907 in Leeds. In the United Kingdom he had earned degrees of the Universities of Oxford and Leeds; he was awarded the senior Oxford degree of Doctor of Civil Laws at the early age of 28. After Oxford he was articled to a solicitor and held a part-time teaching post in the University of Hull. He went to Harvard as a graduate student in 1930 where he worked under the general direction of Roscoe Pound and was awarded the SJD in 1932. He was appointed to a junior teaching post there, as his friend and contemporary Erwin Griswold wrote, 'endeavouring to measure up to the Harvard Law School tradition of juniiores and labores'. He returned for a time to the United Kingdom and in 1938 became Professor of Law and Dean of the Faculty of Law in Auckland, New Zealand.

In 1942, he was appointed Challis Professor of Jurisprudence and International Law in the University of Sydney. It was wartime, and there was some unhappy controversy surrounding the appointment, but over the thirty years of his tenure of the Chair, he securely established his great reputation as a teacher, scholar and publicist, and his major work was done primarily from this Australian base. Though he travelled very widely, Sydney was his home from that time until his death more than forty years later.

During the war years he served on the Prime Minister's Committee on National Morale, and he became a member of the Directorate of Research at the Land Headquarters of General Blamey. That unusual organisation under the direction of the late Alf Conlon housed some very talented temporary soldiers. In the war years, he also began his career as a radio commentator, and over many years he built up a great radio following. He was the second Boyer Lecturer for the ABC in 1960 and spoke on Law and Policy in the Quest for Survival. He was Chairman of the Australian UNESCO Committee for the Social Sciences for a decade from 1950 to 1960.

He was in great demand in many places overseas; he was a lecturer and visiting professor in the United States, Europe and India. He had a deep attachment to Israel where he had close links with the Universities, and he was the founding Academic Director of the Truman Research Institute in the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

In 1972, he retired from the University of Sydney, but this simply marked a transfer to the University of New South Wales. The Dean of the Law School in that University spoke of his 'catch' in attracting Julius Stone to a younger and very active law school. One such appointment was not enough; Julius Stone also held a continuing appointment as Distinguished Professor at the Hastings College of Law of the University of California in San Francisco. That College has a special character, established through its policy of recruiting famous emeriti who have retired from the schools in which they achieved their fame. Julius Stone was an active and productive scholar almost up to his death; his Dean at the University of New South Wales reported that he 'counted no less than 44 major articles and other contributions which have come from his pen in the past decade'.

The range of Stone's writings in the law and associated fields is very wide; the Festschrift, Legal Change: Essays in Honour of Julius Stone published in 1983, to mark the fiftieth year of his life as a law teacher and scholar, listed his books, treatises, monographs and principal articles over this period. His first major contribution to jurisprudence, The Province and Function of Law, published in 1946, attracted wide and favourable attention and it was highly praised by his great teacher and mentor, Roscoe Pound. Out of it grew the massive trilogy Legal Systems and Lawyers' Reasonings (1964), Human Law and Human Justice (1965) and Social Dimensions of Law and Justice (1966). This corpus of writing has been described as the most comprehensive account yet written of modern jurisprudential thought.

The substance of Stone's approach to law has been well stated by Professor Blackshield, the editor of the 1983 Festschrift. He says that Stone has always 'located it firmly in the context of human experience in the stream of time. This is a context of changefulness and sensory richness in which legal material is to be judged not merely by its elegance, but also by its responsiveness to the human aspiration for justice and to all the pressures and challenges arising — and inevitably continuing to rise — from the social and economic changes of which the law is merely a part'. As was well and plainly said in an earlier tribute to Stone, he constantly enquired of every legal rule and institution 'what are you good for?'

In the field of international law, to which he made massive contributions, such books as Legal Controls of International Conflict (1954), Aggression and World Order (1958) and Quest for Survival (1961) did much to bring international law to grips with modern realities. A more recent study, Israel and Palestine: Assault on the Law of Nations (1981) asserted the importance of international law, discussed in this book in the context of the resolution of the complex issues involved in the Arab-Israel peace process, with which Stone was deeply and passionately concerned.

I first met Julius Stone during the war years, when he gave me encouragement as I was looking forward to the renewal of law studies at Oxford. Then I met him again when I returned to Melbourne as Professor of Law and, in the years which followed, we were colleagues in the Australian Universities Law Schools Association in important, exciting and formative times, and we maintained a friendship and association throughout our joint lives. As the biographer of Isaac Isaacs, I wrote at some length about the protracted and unhappy debate between Isaacs, then retired from the Office of Governor-General, and Stone over issues relating to Zionism and British policy in Palestine in the early 1940s. Julius Stone's pamphlet-book Stand up and be Counted was a detailed and effective response to Isaacs' attacks on what he styled 'political Zionism'. It was a courageous act on the part of a young and not yet well established law professor, to which his antagonist responded with angry personal rebuke. Stone then demonstrated, as he did throughout his life, a deep commitment to the Jewish National Home which was soon to emerge as the State of Israel.

As Governor-General, I was delighted to be asked to write a foreword to the Festschrift which honoured Stone in 1983. By the time it was published, I had retired from that office, but I was deeply pleased to pay tribute to the most distinguished Australian law teacher of my generation. Thereafter, I saw him only once, when I was visiting the United States in 1983, and I came to speak at Harvard and the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy. As I wrote elsewhere 'at both places he was present at the lectures . . . There, as always, he was an active, enthusiastic and generous participant, handling almost seventy-six years with perfect ease.'

He received many honours: prizes, honorary degrees, professional recognition as a QC, and decorations. He was awarded the OBE in 1973 and the AO in 1981. Yet, as one who has had something to do with this business, I wonder whether his massive achievement was adequately recognised.

I wrote some months ago, in the last year of his life, that the record of achievement is immense, and that Julius Stone is, by general agreement, regarded as one of the great legal scholars of his day. He has won the respect, admiration and affection of generations of students; he is a warm and generous friend. He has been secure in a happy family life; the record of activity and publication makes it difficult to see how he could find time for this, but it is so.

Save, sadly, that I have to turn the present tense into the past, I ask leave to repeat these words.

DON RAWSON, Secretary

We have examined the books and records of The Academies' Australia-China Exchange in the Humanities and Social Science and have obtained all the information and explanations that we required. In my opinion the above Statement of Receipts and Payments represents a true and fair view of the financial position of The Academies' Australia-China Exchange in the Humanities and Social Sciences as at 30 June 1986 and of its cash transactions for the year ending on that date.
